It has further been submitted that the FSL report has not supported the case of the prosecution.

5. Learned APP for the State has opposed the bail application on the ground that the prosecutrix has made a consistent and corroborated statement on oath. It has been submitted that if the accused is admitted to bail, he may hamper the trial.

6. The parameter for grant of bail or refusing to do so, particularly in serious offences are very settled in Kalyan Chandra Sarkar vs. Rajesh Ranjan alias Pappu Yadav and Anr. (2004) 7 SCC 528 . However, at the same time, it has been held repeatedly that the prolonged detention in the custody during trial cannot be termed as punitive measure. The question of admitting the accused on bail on account of prolonged incarceration has come up for discussion in several cases before the Apex Court. In Union of India v. K.A. Najeer reported as (2021) 3 SCC 713 dated 01.02.2021, the Apex Court stated that if a timely trial is not possible, courts are ordinarily obligated to release the under trial on bail and statutory restrictions do not exclude the discretion of Constitutional courts to grant bail on grounds of violation of Fundamental Rights enshrined in Part III of the Constitution. While the said judgement was passed in the context of UAPA, the said observations merit mention:-

"xxx 12. Even in the case of special legislations like the Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987 or the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act, 1985 ("the NDPS Act") which too have somewhat rigorous conditions for grant of bail, this Court in Paramjit Singh v. State (NCT of Delhi), Babba v. State of Maharashtra and Umarmia v. State of Gujarat enlarged the accused on bail when they had been in jail for an extended period of time with little This is a digitally signed order.

The constitutionality of harsh conditions for bail in such special enactments, has thus been primarily justified on the touchstone of speedy trials to ensure the protection of innocent civilians. xxx

15. This Court has clarified in numerous judgments that the liberty guaranteed by Part III of the Constitution would cover within its protective ambit not only due procedure and fairness but also access to justice and a speedy trial. In Supreme Court Legal Aid Committee (Representing Undertrial Prisoners v. Union of India, it was held that undertrials cannot indefinitely be detained pending trial. Ideally, no person ought to suffer adverse consequences of his acts unless the same is established before a neutral arbiter. However, owing to the practicalities of real life where to secure an effective trial and to ameliorate the risk to society in case a potential criminal is left at large pending trial, the courts are tasked with deciding whether an individual ought to be released pending trial or not. Once it is obvious that a timely trial would not be possible and the accused has suffered incarceration for a significant period of time, the courts would ordinarily be obligated to enlarge them on bail.

17. It is thus clear to us that the presence of statutory restrictions like Section 43-D(5) of the UAPA per se does not oust the ability of the constitutional courts to grant bail on grounds of violation of Part III of the Constitution. Indeed, both the restrictions under a statute as well as the powers exercisable under constitutional jurisdiction can be well harmonised. Whereas at commencement of proceedings, the courts are expected to appreciate the legislative policy against grant of bail but the rigours of such provisions will melt down where there is no likelihood of trial being completed within a reasonable time and the period of incarceration already undergone has exceeded a substantial part of the prescribed sentence. Such an approach would safeguard against the possibility of This is a digitally signed order.
